

INTRODUCTION: 62287 is an angular, coherent, medium dark gray fragment (Fig. 1). It contains rare, small white and black clasts, and has conchoidal fracture in places. It is probably a fine-grained or glassy impact melt. It was taken from a soil sample collected about 30 m south of Buster Crater and lacks zap pits.

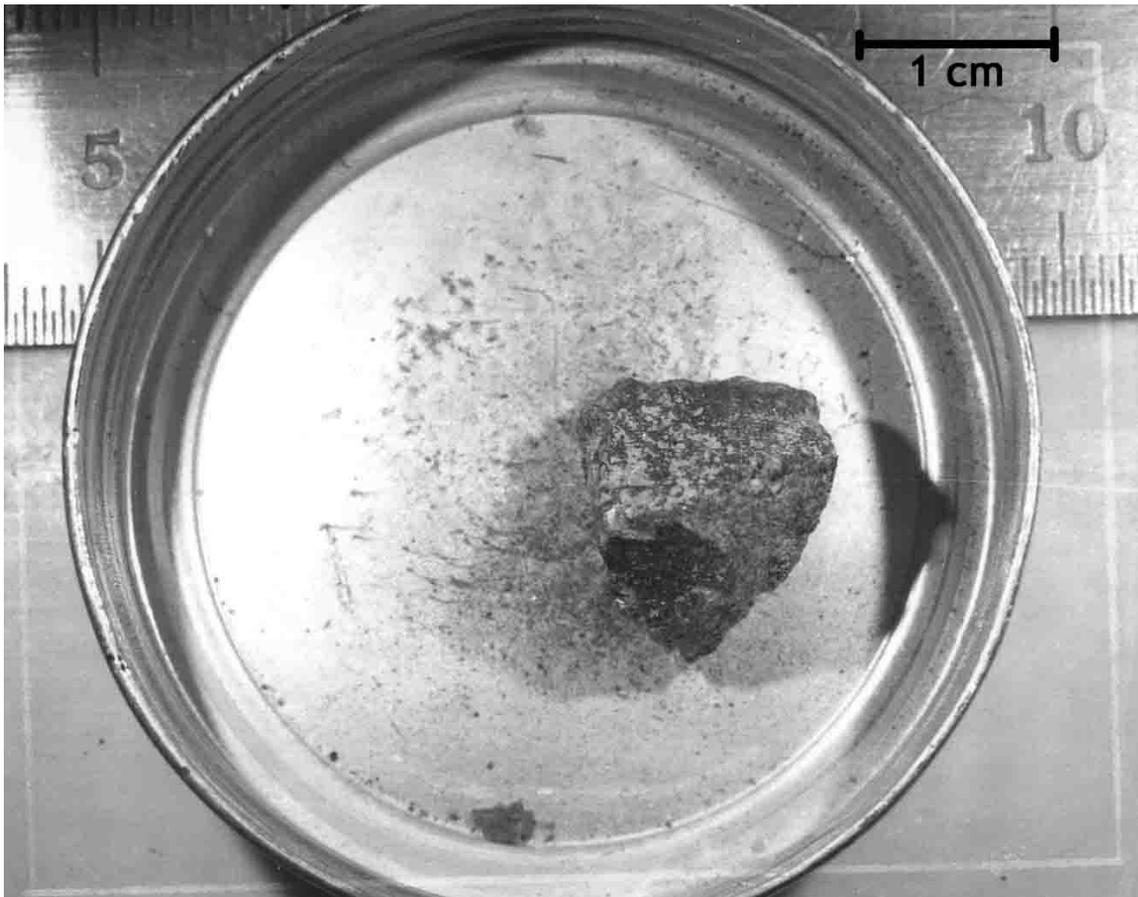

FIGURE 1.